FIND REMOTE WORK

For most people, the biggest hurdle to RVing or traveling full-time is finding a way to support themselves on the road. But with the internet and the rise of location independence, it's easier than ever to find remote jobs for digital nomads (or to start your own business or create a freelance side hustle).

I've seen a lot of questions about where to find remote jobs in our Facebook group, but since Heath and I have always run our business on the road, I never had a great answer.

So I did a LOT of research and came up with this list of 38 job boards where you can find remote work. In fact, remote work has become so popular, that most major job boards have built-in filters for remote work now.

Note: As mentioned above, I don't have any first-hand experience with any of these job boards since I've always run a business on the road.

Without further ado, here are 38 places to search for a job you can work from anywhere!

1.

FLEXJOBS

Flexjobs is easily the most well known and recommended online job board for remote work. I'm not sure if it's the biggest online job board for remote work, but it's definitely the first place I would look when searching for work on the road.

In addition to posting a ton of truly remote jobs, they also have a great blog with resources on how to make money from home and job search tips.

(If you do choose to use FlexJobs, they sent us a 30% off coupon code for you to use! Use the code FLEXLIFE when you sign up for your membership.)

2.

WE WORK REMOTELY

(Not to be confused with WeWork, the chain of coworking spaces.)

We Work Remotely claims to be the largest online job board for remote work. They post mostly tech jobs, but have customer support and copywriting jobs listed as well. They do have some unique job postings too, so if you want to work as a matchmaker for an online dating company this is the place to look.

3.

ANGEL LIST

The place to find remote work specifically at a startup. Looking over recent posts, I'm seeing job options for everything from social media management to UX design to business development and sales. You can filter to view only remote jobs too.

INFINITE NOMAD

A job board built by nomads for nomads. They really tout on their website that they are 100% scam-free and have only the highest quality job postings on their site, although it does look like this job board is actually just pulling job postings from Indeed, instead of being hand-curated.

AUTHENTIC JOBS

A job board for creatives, developers, and designers. It looks like this site shows mostly in office job opportunities but has a remote filter.

AMAZON CAMPERFORCE

While you need to be in one place for a season, I've heard great things about the benefits provided by Amazon. They hire seasonal warehouse workers and offer benefits like health insurance, bonuses, and paid campsites. You will be on your feet all day, so investing comfortable shoes!

CAREER BUILDER

This giant online job board has a "work from home" filter. You can also filter by seasonal or temporary work if you're looking for short term gigs as you travel from place to place.

8.

DRIBBLE

Jobs for designers. Mostly full-time positions, but some contract work. Just click the "remote-friendly" filter as you search.

9.

HUBSTAFF

For both freelance and remote work across the globe. This site claims to be 100% free with no fees or commissions. They have a huge array in jobs posted from database management, customer service, coding, Facebook advertising, project management, writing, and more. Might be a great place to start a search if you aren't quite sure what type of work you're interested and want lots of options.

10.

REMOTE WORK HUB

Long-term location independent jobs.

11.

INDEED

Of course the biggest online job boards have filters for finding remote jobs now! Indeed has a TON of job listings and a ton of helpful job search information/

If you're trying to figure what types of jobs people can actually do while traveling, you can get a feel for all the different types of online jobs offered from Indeed's site. You can also actually see reviews of the companies on Indeed as well.

12.

IDEALIST

If you want more than a job and want to make a difference in the world, Idealist posts jobs focused on doing good in the world. This is a good place to start if you're looking for jobs in the nonprofit sector.

When searching for jobs, check the left side menu and check "Remote" to filter for remote jobs.

MONSTER

The job board we've all heard of. Search "telecommute" or "remote" to filter for remote work.

14.

JOBSPRESSO

Jobspresso posts jobs in tech, marketing, and customer support.

Some remote work sites are great for working from home and some are specifically great for travelers. Jobspresso may not be the best option for travelers as some jobs are limited to specific continents or time zones.

15.

LETS WORK REMOTELY

So far of all the job boards I've seen, I like this one the best for the design of their job postings. They really show you how much each position is offering and if the job is full-time, part-time, or contract work so you can easily filter through opportunities.

RAT RACE REBELLION

Founded in 1999, RRR is a huge database for online and work from home jobs.

17.

POWER TO FLY

Specifically for women with a filter for remote jobs, Power to Fly has plenty of flexible jobs. They work specifically with companies who care about "investing in gender diversity and inclusion."

PROBLOGGER

As a writer, I've read ProBlogger for years but just now realized they have a job board! Tons of freelance and full-time jobs posted here for writers.

REMOTE MACHINE

LEARNING JOBS

Here's a niche for you! This site specializes in "Remote work in Machine Learning, Data Science, Deep Learning and Artificial Intelligence." It doesn't get much more specific than that.

REMOTE4ME

Offers jobs in tech and non-tech, aggregated and filtered from multiple job boards. A lot of highly skilled positions listed on this one, like video game design, animation, and engineers.

21.

THE MUSE

I'd heard of the Muse for job search advice and coaching, but they also have a filter for searching for remote work. I see a lot of senior-level remote positions as well.

REMOTE OK

Offers a variety of tech and non-tech remote jobs, but most jobs are for developers. These guys claim to have the largest job board for digital nomads. (And they are probably the fifth website I've seen brag about being the largest or #1 job board)

23.

ATLAS & BOOTS

This outdoor travel blog has a whole page dedicated to posting remote work for digital nomads. Jobs are posted by job type so you can scroll down to your skillset. They also have a Facebook group where they post jobs as well.

24.

REMOTELY AWESOME

JOBS

A remote job aggregator, this site pulls from 10 other job boards to create their list. At the time of writing, I'm seeing a ton of jobs for companies based in Asia.

REMOTE

Posts mostly remote jobs with some continent-specific jobs. Posts jobs at startups with worldwide companies.

26.

SKIP THE DRIVE

Mostly full-time work from home or remote jobs. They have a lot of range in job postings from the usual suspects to harder to find options like nursing and human resources.

They actually have a cool calculator on their site so you can see how much money you save by not commuting to work.

27.

STACK OVERFLOW

This one is specifically for web developers. Filter by remote work.

28.

RUBY NOW

Not just specific to developers, but specific to Ruby on Rails developers. Probably the most niche job board I've ever seen.

29.

VIRTUAL VOCATIONS

18,000+ telecommuting jobs. This site has quite a few harder to find remote job options like paralegal, attorney, nurse practitioner, teacher, and health care.

WORKAMPER®

Specializing in finding jobs at campgrounds, if you're looking for a job that includes free lodging for your RV, Workamper is the place to look. We, however, have found that positions like Campground Hosts often don't pay enough to make it worth your time. They are great gigs for saving money or getting to stay in cool places for cheap, but not a way that we recommend for making money on the road.

WORKERS ON WHEELS

I'm including this site because it's one of the few jobs sites with jobs specific for RVers, but the website is poorly designed and most of the jobs posted are MLMs or network marketing opportunities. There are some camp hosting and workamping jobs posted here as well, but the website is difficult to read and navigate.

WORKEW

I keep reading their name as "work, ew" but this is another remote-specific job board for digital nomads. Some jobs may be country or continent specific.

33.

WORKING NOMADS

Like the name implies, thousands of work from anywhere jobs for nomads. Most jobs are for developers but marketing, sales, writing, and design positions are also common.

34.

AXIOM LAW

If you're a lawyer looking to travel full-time Axiom is the first "digital law firm" I've found that employs lawyers worldwide.

APRES

This site is specifically for moms returning to work after an absence. It's not exclusively remote work, but they do have a remote filter. Jobs can be full-time, part-time, or flexible hours. They also offer online classes and career coaches.

36.

AMAZON'S MECHANICAL TURK

I am not 100% sure I am going to describe this correctly, but essentially you can get paid to answer surveys and simple questions. Tasks could include "identifying objects in a photo or video, performing data de-duplication, transcribing audio recordings or researching data details". Based on what I've read, you'd be doing surveys or data entry. You can choose gigs based on your interest as well.

I asked a few people who have tried it and said that's good for a little extra money, but not a full-time gig.

37.

EXPAT GENIUS

Still in Beta, this site is for those of you living abroad. You can work as a "Genius" and essentially be a resource and guide for fellow expats moving to your area.

38.

COOL WORKS

Okay this isn't remote work, but it was too cool to not include! If you're looking to move to a beautiful new place for a season, check out CoolWorks. You can actually browse by state, so if you want to spend a summer in Alaska, you can find work as a kayak guide, bicycle tour adventure leader, or work in the Arctic circle. This is a great way to have an excuse to live in a resort town in the mountains or beachside for a season.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Heath and Alyssa Padgett have been living, working and traveling in an RV since their wedding day in May of 2014. According to their parents, they are on permanent-vacation. According to Heath and Alyssa, they work every day. There is probably a middle ground of truth here.

During their first year of marriage, Heath & Alyssa traveled to all 50 states filming a documentary called Hourly America where Heath worked an hourly job in each state while Alyssa filmed the adventure. Their documentary work has been featured on CNN, CBS, Fox, Forbes and more, and has led to consulting work with brands like Chick-fil-A, UPS, and Winnebago.

Together they run HeathandAlyssa.com, a popular RV lifestyle blog. Heath hosts The RV Entrepreneur podcast, where he interviews fellow full-time RVers on what it's like running a business while traveling full-time. Heath is the CEO of Campground Booking, a software company he started from their Winnebago and Alyssa is the best selling author of A Beginner's Guide to Living in an RV. They also host an annual conference for nomadic entrepreneurs called The RV Entrepreneur Summit.
